The Global Health Program here at NTU has allowed me to gain a comprehensive understanding of the interconnectedness of health systems, social determinants of health, and the distribution of disease prevalence and health equity worldwide. I have been given access to tools that will help me in the future as I embark on a global health career path, and have been able to learn more about community engagement and cultural competence which are all necessary facets of global health policy. I am grateful to all of my professors for their expertise and guidance, as well as my classmates and cohort for their support, friendship, and insights in the classroom. Furthermore, I would like to extend my gratitude towards my advisors, Professor Yeh and Professor Chen for their mentorship and support.
