

110-2 優秀研究生 Alexandra Lombardo

Alexandra Lombardo is a 2023 Master's candidate of the Global Health program, supported by a Fulbright grant. Prior to joining NTU, she received a BA in East Asian Studies from Yale University and matriculated at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, where she will be receiving her MD in 2024. Ever since starting learning Chinese as a 13 year old in high school from a Taiwanese teacher in Indiana, she has been eager to live abroad. She is grateful for the support of her adviser, 張齡尹, in conducting her Master thesis research to explore menstrual health inequities among adolescents and young adults in Taiwan. She is hopeful that she can use her experience over these past two years to combine public health and medicine in a future career as a globally-minded gynecologist providing culturally competent care.
